CHINESE CAL.

Formerly used in China, in which the year consisted of twelve months of 29 or 30 days each, with an intercalary month added in every 30.

New year's day occurred (and is still popularly celebrated) on the 1st NEW MOON after the sun entered the sign AQUARIUS, and hence was never earlier than Jan. 21 or later than Feb 19.

The Chinese era dated from 2697 B.C.-
when (according to tradition) the system of 60-year Cycles (SEXAGENARY Cycles)
was established.

officially, the Gregorian Cal. has been adopted in China and the year is now reckoned from the beginning of the Republic, in 1912; thus, 1948 was the 37th year of the Republic.
